

More than half of American adolescents with psychiatric disorders receive no treatment of any sort. Moreover, when treatment does occur, the providers are rarely mental health specialists....It's still the case in this country that people don't take psychiatric conditions as seriously as they should....This, despite the fact that these conditions are linked to a whole host of other problems.

Dr. E. Jane Costello, Duke University 2013